

Aksel Hugo is particularly interested in the concept of space and how this concept may be explored and re-examined within natural science, education and everyday life.

Method harvest: After the workshop groups have shared their work with each other, we end with a writing session, where we will gather the findings related to method: This will lead to a common text workshop on Monday, where our experiences related to the different methods will be put together in a collection of text fragments. These texts will be further edited to a first sketch of a position-paper on transformative methods. Aksel Hugo and David Crouch will have the main responsibility for this writing workshop.
